INTRODUCTION

Feng Shui is the Asian art of interior decoration and layout for the purpose of increasing energy and reducing stress.

According to ancient traditions, Feng Shui can increase your energies of romance and passion and help to attract your soulmate. These same techniques may also strengthen help harmonize an existing relationship.

These steps will focus on two main areas of the residence: the “living areas” (front room, dining room, den) and the bedroom.

Our approach involves both a “quick makeover” to immediately improve the romantic quality of the home and more detailed steps that can be taken as time permits.

ELEMENTS, COLORS, SYMBOLS & ROMANTIC ENERGIES

Before looking at specific Feng Shui techniques, some background is helpful.

- 1) Much of Chinese metaphysics is based on “the 5 elements” of fire, earth, water, wood, and metal. Of these, Fire and Earth are most associated with romance.
- 2) Wood destroys earth and water destroys fire, so we will minimize these elements.
- 3) Yang colors are bright, projecting, and energizing such as red, orange & yellow.
- 4) Yang symbols include the Sun, Fire, Horses, Dragons, Snakes, Men, etc.
- 5) Yin symbols include the Moon, Women, and balance symbols like double happiness.

THE LINK BETWEEN LIVING AND SLEEPING AREAS

Ideally, we want the living areas of the home to “generate and project” romantic passions. We then want those energies to “flow” into the bedroom which has a more “attractive” quality.

In various metaphysical parlance, living areas are should be more masculine, yang, bright, and electric. This is balanced by the bedroom areas which should be more feminine, yin, soft, and magnetic.

The living area “stimulates and projects” while the bedroom “relaxes & attracts”

It is this COMBINATION of yin and yang that “optimizes” the residence for soulmate attraction, romantic passion, and preservation of the relationship.

LIVING AREAS: THE SOUTHWEST CORNER

The living areas of the home are for socializing. They should be bright and active with a yang (masculine) energetic quality.

Feng Shui uses an 8-sided guide called the PaKua to identify the 8 major directions or corners of the home. Each corner is associated with a specific type of energy. The area of the house most associated with romantic energy is the southwest corner of the living areas.

Our first step is to identify the southwest “living area”. We’re not interested in garages or restrooms or kitchens, but the southwestern most “living area”, be that a front room, dining room, den, or other “socialization” space.

LIVING AREA: QUICK MAKEOVER

Romance and passion energies BEGIN in the SW corner of the home. After locating your southwest corner, here's a "one day makeover" to increase these energies & to attract your soulmate.

- 1) Remove clutter and furniture so that energy can "flow freely" to and from the SW corner. Remove electronics, computers, audio, etc.
- 2) Remove water, wood, plants, & their images.
- 3) Use images or figurines of the Sun, mountains, horses, dragons, and/or the Chinese animal archetype of your birth year.
- 4) Hang a few red lanterns or place a few red candles in this area. Keep it bright & well lit
- 5) A small table is okay but should have a glass or marble top rather than wood or metal
- 6) Use "yang" colors like red, yellow & orange. Minimize the use of greens, browns, and "metallic" colors like gold, silver & copper.

BEDROOM: QUICK MAKEOVER

- 1) The bed should not share a wall with a restroom. Keep restroom doors closed at night.
- 2) Cover or remove mirrors. No mirrors should be visible from the bed upon awakening.
- 3) Remove yang electronics, computers, TVs, etc.
- 4) Plants (especially flowers) & water may inspire men to wander. Remove them & their images.
- 5) Hang a picture of the bright full moon.
- 6) Remove work & “office” stuff.
- 7) Make room in closet for your soulmate’s clothes
- 8) Hang or place the double happiness symbol.
- 9) Avoid too many loud yang colors: red, yellow, orange. Use softer earth-tone feminine colors.
- 10) “New mates” may hang a red lantern or red candle for a few months but reduce it over time.

INCREASING ROMANTIC ENERGY: INTERMEDIATE STEPS

- 1) Proper bed placement: Avoid sharp furniture “arrow edges”. Bed should not “point” directly out the door. Move bed so that it is not underneath a beam.
- 2) As you look out the front door of the home there should be no water on the right side of the door, either inside or outside of the house. This includes: ponds, pools, fish tanks, etc.)
- 3) Make “room in your home” for your soulmate. Make space in closets, the refrigerator, storage, etc.
